"Mr. Wright will be assuming an active consultant's role in our answer to the amended complaint in the original subpoena," Mr. Warren said

Mr. Wright left the White House last fall and returned to his teaching duties at the university, somewhat miffed at how he had been treated. Late in October he told Judge John J. Sirica, of U.S. District Court in Washington, that the President would turn over to the court all the material sought by the special Watergate prosecutor's office. A few days later, the White House disclosed that one of the key tape recordings sought by the prosecutor had never existed, due to a technical failure, a fact that the President and some of his assistants had known for a

Single Delegation Urgedfor Geneva

BEIRUT, Jan. 8 (AP).-Egypt. Syria and Jordan have agreed to hold a summit conference in Damascus to coordinate their policies at the second stage of he Arab-Israeli peace talks in Geneva. Arab diplomats here re-ported today.

They said that King Hussein of Jordan wants the three Arab countries plus the Palestinians and Lebanon represented by one unified delegation at the Geneva negotiations.

Hussein is expected to strongly urge the unification move at the coming Damascus summit talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Syrian President Haicz Assad, one diplomatic source said. The diplomatic sources also said that they expect Secretary of State Henry A Kissinger to make a third tour of the Middle East The diplomats said that the Syrian and Jordanian governments had word that Mr. Kissinger plans to make the tour before the end of this month.

-Mr. Kissinger may soon visit the Middle East again to help work out an agreement between Egypt and Israel on the scoaration of their forces along the Suez Canal, State Department officials said today.

The officials said that no final decision had been taken on travel plans, but that Mr. Kissinger and his top aides were thinking seriously about a trip to Cairo and Jerusalem—and perhaps some other Middle East capitals—to seek to mediate differences over how to carry out the troop disengagement and to provide a spur to the Geneva peace conference.

Mr. Kissinger discussed the Israeli approach to disengage-ment last Friday and Saturday with Defense Minister Most Dayan, who flew back to Israel to join in Israeli discussions on what his government's formal proposal should be. State Department officials said

The new agency, the Department of Energy, will be headed by Mr. Heath's closest adviser, Lord Carrington, the Secretary of Defense. The department will control the nation's programs for offshore oil, electricity, coal, gas and nuclear energy.

It was a move with some political overtones in view of proposa's in Parliament for revamping the government's machinery to deal with the present crisis, stemming from oil and coal shortages, and to search for long-term solutions. # 🖁 Geneva Oil Talks Create Optimism On Lower Prices

GENEVA. Jan. 8 (Reuters).—Iranian Finance Minister Jamshid Amousegar said today that the price of crude oil from the six Persian Gulf states could drop by as much as 6 percent. Mr. Amouzegar said that the ministers of the world's 12 major oil exporting countries, meeting here today, discussed the prospects of cutting oil prices in view of the dollar's growing strength, But Mr. Amouzegar, speuking during a break in the conference of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), emphasized that no decision had been reached by the ministers. After meeting for seven hours the 12 OPEC ministers agreed to meet again tomorrow. A 6 percent drop in the recently doubled prices would balance the effective revaluation of the dollar, which has climbed back to levels set at its second official devaluation last February, Mr. Amouzegar said. We are discussing this matter. We have not yet decided," Mr.

Amouzegar, who is conference president, said.

The conference, which opened resterday, is discussing long-term and short-term pricing policy OPEC's relationship with the developing and industrialis-

Mr. Amouzegar said that the prospect for cutting oil prices was provided for in an agreement concluded between OPEC and Western oil companies in Geneva last June.

This was a formula for automatically adjusting oil prices to take account of fluctuations in the exchange rate between the dollar, in which crude oil posted prices are expressed, and other currencies. The June meeting resulted in an increase of 6.1 percent in crude oil posted prices, the basis on which oil companies pay royalties and taxes to the oil states, to compensate for a 10 percent dollar devaluation last February. But the accord also stipulated that if the value of the dollar rose posted prices could go down. In a modification to an earlier agreement, it ruled that a formula governing price adjustments reflecting monetary changes should be recalculated monthly instead of quarterly. This would make a downward revision of prices possible Feb. 1. Upward Swing In Vienna today, an OPEC spokesman said that crude oil prices may be reduced slightly if the dollar continues its present upward swing on world money markets. Amouzegar's 6 percent figure appeared to be an estimate based on the value of the dollar in recent days. The six Persian Gulf countries Abu Dhabi, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Qalar and Saudi Arabia, last month doubled the price of their crude oil to a market value of about $7 per barrel. A 6 percent rise in the value of the dollar would reduce the barrel price by 42 cents. Apart from Gulf countries, Nigeria and Libya were also in-Four other OPEC members, Alrerin, Ecuador, Indonesia and Venezucla, have independent pricing arrangements. After today's meeting ended, sources close to the Algerian dele-gation said that the ministers would decide tomorrow on any price adjustment due to the changed value of the dollar. The question of whether oil prices should be linked to the dollar has assumed critical importance in the last three weeks as the dollar has made strong gains against leading European currencies and the Japanese yen. When the June agreement was made, the dollar was moving equally fast in the opposite direction, and few experts then predicted that it would recover as fast as it has. Mr. Amouzegar stressed at a press briefing tonight that he regarded the present posted price as realistic, and said that he saw no chance of reductions apart from those linked with the

He said that Persian Gulf oil countries were now receiving $7 per barrel for their oil, "It is up to our economic complesion. which we have asked to report on this issue, whether this price should go up," he added,

Mr. Amouzegar warned of the continuing threat of inflation on petroleum prices, saying that he hoped that industrialized countries would be able to reduce their inflation rates.

Calley Asks 2d Review by Appeals Court

By Eugene L. Meyer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (WP), -Lawyers for Lt. William L. Calley jr. yesterday asked the military appeals court—a civilian body-to reconsider its ruling upholding the U.S. Army officer's conviction and sentencing to 20 years at hard labor for his role in the March 16, 1968, My Lai

The motion included an unusual request that the three-judge U.S. Court of Military Appeals delay its reconsideration until a replacement is named for former Chief Judge William H. Darden, the lone dissenter in the Dec. 21 ruling. Judge Darden resigned, effective Dec. 28.

The majority held that a "reasonable man," one of "ordinary sense and understanding," could comprehend the illegality of an order to kill, an order which Calley's superior, Capt. Ernest Medina, denied making.

Judge Darden's dissent—that man of Calley's limited intelligence could not be expected to understand the subtle difference in wartime between justified killing and murder-was emphasized by the defense lawyers yesterday.

Intellectual Elitism'

"The rule of this case, in short, provides justice, or more, for the intellectually astute but none for the slow-witted. Such an approach, resulting in intellectual elitism, is anothema to our concept of criminal justice," Calley's lawyers argued.

Judge Robert M. Duncan, in concurring with the majority opinion written by Judge Robert Quinn, offered another reed Calley's lawyers to grasp. Judge Duncan found the standard by which Calley was measured to be "less than perfect" with a "certain potential for in-justice." but said it is up to the legislature to define a new one. Calley's lawyers also complained that the Army officer had been denied the traditional presumption of innocence. Instead. they said, Calley faced a presumption of guilt, because of pretrial publicity, before his March 39, 1971, conviction for the murder of 22 Vietnamese civilians and assault with intent to murder a child.

This presumption, the lawyers said, carried over to the appeals

Sadat Reportedly Chooses New Premier in Cabinet Shift

CAIRO, Jan. 8 (UPI) - President Anwar Sadat has asked Abdel Aziz Higazi to form a new cabinet, which will take office later this month, authoritative political sources said today. Mr. Sadat has been premier for the last nine months. Mr. Higazi, 51, has been deputy premier and minister of finance, economy and foreign trade in the esent 35-member cabinet which Mr. Sagat formed last March 23. The sources said that the formation of a new cabinet under Mr. Higazi is designed to signal a new phase of domestic activity with emphasis on economic development and reconstruction. Mr. Higazi is considered one of the nation's leading economic ex-perts, the sources said, and as such is highly qualified to carry out the task that Mr. Sadat has

New Israeli Envoy Is Caustic On Armed Welcome to U.K.

LONDON, Jan. 8 (AP).-With London's Heathrow Airport under giant security alert amid fears of an Arab attack, Israel's ambaysador arrived to take up his post today and called for international action to stamp out terrorism. All three British armed services were on alert, with leaves cancel-ed or curtailed. For the fourth consecutive day, hundreds of heavily armed troops and police ringed the airport, which Home cretary Robert Carr described yesterday as a particularly vul-nerable target. Ambassador Gideon Rafael talking to airport newsmen after arriving from Tel Aviv on an El Al airliner, said that the time had come for joint and concerted action against terrorism "So far," he said, "international organizations like the United Nations and International Civil Aviation Organization have not taken that action. They have not been living up to the task."

A reporter suggested to Mr. Rafael that he might be a No. 1 target for terrorists. "Well," he replied. "thank you very much. What a nice welcome."

Mr. Carr, in an interview with the Press Association news agency, said yesterday that the airport troops were given orders to shoot to kill if they are at-tacked, or "if they see people pointing weapons at airliners. #### Athens Accuses 6 In '71 Ship Fire That Killed 25

ATHENS, Jan. 8 (AP).—Six persons were officially charged yesterday with negligence leading to manslaughter in connection with the loss of 25 lives in a fire that swept the Greek passenger ferry Heleanna in August, 1971.

The accused included the ship's owner Greek passenger-ship magnate Constantine Eithymiades, and the ship's captain, Dimitrios Antypes. The other four were the first mate, first mechanic, second mechanic, and the ship's cook. The 11,674-ton ship, described by its owner as the largest pas-senger ferry in the world, caught fire in the Adriatic as it neared Italy. A board of inquiry said it carried 1,018 passengers, 73 more than permitted. The board ruled that inflammable decor and the explosion of gas bottles were largely responsible for the rapid spreading of the fire.

Pilot Reported Accused

ATHENS, Jan. 8 (UPI).-The pilot of an Olympic Airways plane which crashed into the sea near Athens sirport 15 months ago will stand trial for negligent homicide court sources said today. The crash killed 37 persons. The sources said the pilot, Patroclus Thomadakis, was accused of ignoring messages from the control center the night of Oct. 21, 1972, when the plane crashed 200 yards from shore during a rainsform.

> 26.7 % for Food The index for farm products and processed foods and feeds percent, seasonally adjusted in December, and a huge 26.7 percent for 1973 as a whole. But farm and food prices are volatile and occasionally have shown large increases in the past, though not as large as in 1973.

The extraordinary feature of 1973, according to the near-unitersal view of economists in and out of the government, was the rise of 14.8 percent in the broad index of "industrial commodities." ranging from bauxite or copper just mined from the earth to a finished automobile or shirt.

While the most stunning increase was 65 percent in the categury of fuels and power, the in-creases were widespread, reflecting a worldwide boom and soaring prices for raw commodities of nearly all kinds. For example, the index for nonferrous metals—copper, lead, zinc, tin and the like—was up 32.5 percent from December a year ago, and the in-dex for cotton products was up 32.4 percent.

Meany's View

Statements from the government and its critics today took familiar lines. George Meany, president of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, said, "America begins 1974 with the worst kind of economic news." He cited "skyhigh" prices still going higher, and rising unemployment.

Mr. Meany cited the petroleum element in today's statistics. "In the last year," he said, "the wholesale price of crude petroleum increased 27.5 percent, but refined petroleum products increased 125 percent. The result has been outrageous profits for the oil companies and underscores the need for a genuine excess-profits

Herbert Stein, chairman of the presidents council of economic advisers repeated a theme he has frequently emphasized before: "We are now going through an essentially one-time adjustment to higher energy prices, and we are still making an adjustment to relatively short food supplies. These adjustments, which are producing such skyrocketing prices, will come to an end.

Thereafter, the continuing rate of inflation will depend upon the more basic forces of the total demand for output and rate of growth of our total capacity to produce."

Proxmire on Controls

Sen. William Proxmire, D., Wis. vice-charman of the congres-sional Joint Economic Committee, called for an end of wage and sectors of the economy where there is excess demand or insufficient competition." He added:

Controls in these areas can be coupled with the timely and flexible use of export controls and allocation plans to prevent serious domestic shortages."

It is agreed in and out of government that price controls have been unable to contain the price explosion in raw commodities, farm and nonfarm, that dominated 1973. Inflation last year was far worse, as measured by the various price indexes, than the warning ticket and rode on to his office.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (WP) .--The government moved yesterday to halt distribution of a product because it may be too good.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission said that it has asked nine distributors to recall voluntarily at least a million tubes of "instant" glue so sticky that it may be dangerous,

Commission chairman Richard Simpson said that the glue apparently can stick "anything to nything" and acts so quickly that it can cause two fingers to stick together or a finger to stick to a face. It's an "adhesive that's very good," Mr. Simpson said. "Maybe it's too good."

The glue, which has the generic name "cyano-acrylate," is one of the instant glues developed for use in surgery. It is sold in hobby, hardware and drugstores under at least nine brand names.

Ohio Police Kill Insane Convict, Rescue 3 Women

JUNCTION CITY, Ohio, Jan. 8 (AP).—Police killed one immate and wounded another last night after the two men threatened to kill three women hostages at a treatment center for mentally ill convicts, authorities said. The three hostages were not harmed.

Police stormed the room where the hostages were held as a 7 p.m. deadline drew near. The immates had held the women hostage for five hours and had threatened to kill them with homemade knives unless given a getaway car.

Michael Woods, 22, was shot twice and died at a hosnital in nearby Lancaster an hour after the women were freed. Bernard Barbiaux, 32, suffered head and arm wounds and was described as being in satisfactory condition. The women were treated for shock. All three worked in the 12cility's records center.

Dr. Kenneth E. Gaver, director the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, said he made the decision for the police to break into the room shooting. Dr. Gaver said he considered the men as dangerous and felt that the women's lives were in jeopardy, a spokesman said. The Highway Patrol said policemen talked to the men for 15 minutes before storming the room.

The most recent occurred three months ago at ITT headquarters in New York City.

"My feeling," said Mr. Lefcourt, "is that if Kathy Boudin and Bernadine Dorhn and Mark Rudd walked into my office tomorrow and said. 'Call the FBI,' the FBI would come down here and arrest them for something. They would be charged with those bombing or something. #### Baker to Pay U.S. $40,000 In Settlement

Agreement Is Reached In Justice Dept. Suit

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (AP) .-Robert G. (Bobby: Baker, convicted influence-peddler m a major Johnson administration scandal, agreed in court today to pay the U.S. Treasury $40,000. A federal suit originally sought to recover $108.000 of what the government called influencepeddling money paid to Baker when he was chief Senate aide to Lyndon B. Johnson. Justice Department lawyers agreed in a consent judgment that the amount Baker retained uns actually half that.

The department's lawyer on the civil case, Stanley Paige, said the settlement represented a substantial part of the money at stake and demonstrated that government employees who collect outside money related to their jobs cannot expect to keep it. Silent in Court

Baker, 45, who appeared in court with his daughter, Cissy, 20, looking on, would make no comment to newsmen and was silent during the proceedings. Baker's lawyer, William E. ## Currency Is Not a Toy declining purchasing power of the dollar at will be profit in buying the dollar now. But home with dubious eyes, their currency is evoking quite different emotions abroad. This may suggest that profit is not without honor save in its own country, but the dollar's upsurge on the global market, following its distresses last year, is really another example of the dangers of the short view in matters of world currency.

To be sure, the strength of the dollar is a reflection of what is, in all probability, a fact: that the American economy will be better able to sustain the energy crisis, for short and long term, than those industrial nations whose high performance in recent years seemed to shadow that of the United States. Even the British pound, although sagging under the impact of Britain's worst economic crisis since World War II, has been sustained by the promise of energy from the North Sea fields.

But the money-mongers last year, whether gnomes of Zurich, afreets of Arabia or ogres of the multinational corporations, were not very shrewd in their long-term calculations when they drove down the dollar. Not only did they fail to foresee the energy crisis, although signs of it were apparent, but they underrated the basic American economic soundness which was to become evident in food exports and a newly favorable balance

There was undoubtedly profit for some in

While many Americans are viewing the selling the dollar short last year, and there that is not really the point. The fluctuations of major currencies have an impact that goes far beyond the gains or losses of those whose main interest lies in the temporary rise and fail of the dollar, the pound, the mark, the franc, the yen. Currency liquidity is part of the process of trade among nations, but it can become a hazard and an obstacle to that trade, and a grave problem to the nations who depend upon it for their livelihood.

The postwar structure of international currency arrangements has been shattered. There are wide differences over the methods that might be used to restore order to a chaotic market. There is, in fact, good reason to question many of the assumptions on which the whole existing system of international trade is founded: the relationships between industrial states and those who provide them with raw materials and with markets, for example. It is, then, too much to expect that any very speedy or permanent arrangement for world currency can be reached that will accurately reflect the shifting bases or real wealth that lie behind the coins and banknotes. But it is not too much to require of the nations that they start now to study and work for such an arrangement and that they apply at least temporary measures to cure some of the existing ills. Money, in the cliché, is not everything-but it is too important in its effects to be left as the plaything of the

Ethiopia Food Aid: A Case History

The case of Ethiopia, which is exporting grain for cash while importing food for free to relieve its hungry poor, cannot fail to dishearten anyone concerned with the tightening world food situation. As far as outsiders knew, Ethiopia was struck last year by a terrible drought which uprooted a million or more peasants in two provinces and left an estimated 50,000 to 100,000 dead. It seemed typical of the growing number of countries whose whole development is jeopardized by inadequacies on the basic front of food. These nations live on the ragged edge of the weather: a good season barely lets them stay even, a bad season can push them over. It is precisely because of the seeming predicament of countries like Ethiopia that the international community is starting, begrudgingly, to explore new ways to cope with the feeding and development of the world's poor. We say the "seeming" predicament of Ethiopia with a purpose. For it turns out that it is simplistic, if not downright wrong, to attribute its recent miseries to drought. The responsibility, or a good portion of it, had much better be fixed on the country's political leadership. In brief, Ethiopia's political system has not provided it with the cushion to absorb the admittedly heavy blows of nature which the country is bound to suffer. Even a quick glance at the political system conveys an impression of what it has failed to do. Provincial officials in the drought zone, for instance, apparently figured that officials at the center did not wish to be disturbed by the bad news. Months later, once the news did get through. the Ethiopian government was still reluctant to advertise the problem by seeking international aid. Nor did it choose to treat the problem itself, to the degree it might have. by diverting grain intended for commercial export. To local protests about its attitude toward its own starving citizens, the government seems to have responded with extreme stiffness, sometimes with gunfire.

In Ethiopia, the government appears to have distributed a great deal of land to political favorites in return for their loyalty. Peasants have small chance to own their own land and make a decent living on it. The Ethiopian parliament, which is heavy with big landowners, has been discussing land reform for years without effective results. Emergencies such as local droughts merely give big landowners a better chance to buy poor smallholders out at fire-sale terms. That is to say, what seems at first glance to be a problem of production aggravated by had weather is at the same time, perhaps to a larger extent, a problem of politics and social organization as well, Ethiopia's policy poses a genuine dilemma for outsiders moved by the spectacle of human suffering. Why and how should outsiders care for people left in the lurch by their own government? In the current situation, a foreign church group led by an Irish priest has provided more relief, according to press reports, than has the Ethiopian Orthodox Church, which is said to own 20 percent of the arable land. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D., Mass.,—uninhibited, as is the U.S. government, by any felt requirement to defer to the sensibilities of Haile Selassiehas been more active in focusing public attention than has the aged emperor him-

Those who help are filling a real need. The beneficiaries would otherwise be in even more desperate straits. But they are being exploited in a sense by a remiss government. More serious, they are taking up some of that government's slack and allowing it to continue avoiding the hard choices that will be necessary if it is to care conscientiously for its own people. That is, of course, the classical dilemma of aid of any sort: it can enhance dependency as well as ease distress. But it needs to be squarely faced in respect to food aid, because the world may already be in a period when food aid is the most important kind.

Rhodesia's Invitation

If the ruling caucus in Rhodesia had a sense of humor, a double jest could be detected in its campaign to attract one million new white immigrants. The most despondent British winter since the war obviously seemed a locular time to invite to a country of great beauty, prolonged sunshine and cheap labor all those people tired of cold grates and workers who do not know their place. Rhodesia's immigration record recently has not been good. In November there was a net gain of only 74 and in September there was a net loss of 110. Against these figures, one million new Rhodesians seems a shade optimistic, especially as the incomers would outnumber the resident whites four to one. But the other irony, not made plain in the advertisement, is that the able-bodied immigrants would have to join the police reserves and might well, before long, be manning the barricades. . . .

Seventy-Five Years Ago

January 9, 1899 WASHINGTON.-The financial and commercial position of the United States is, on the whole, fairly satisfactory. Railway companies' receipts still tend upward; money continues easy and is likely to do so until the government requires the large sum, belonging to the Treasury.

now in the hands of the banks.

The trade agreement-admittedly a milestone in the developing relations between Tokyo and Peking - was on the horizon before Mr. Ohira set out from Tokyo on his hurriedly planned Peking mission. But it goes to his credit that he has concluded this first official trade pact with Peking without any delay. However, what Mr. Ohira did not get from Peking is more significant than what he has managed to obtain in the bargain. The Ohira mission had raised hopes in many quarters that the stalled airroute talks between Tokyo and Peking would at least be reopened and brought to a successful-accord. But Mr. Ohira has not been able to make any progress in this vital front ... However, the Chinese leadership that knows that Premier Kakuei Tanaka's political future is considerably dependent on his foreign policy, including the China air link, is not just ready to strike a deal without getting in return the heavy political price it is waiting for.

Politics Under the Earth

By C. L. Sulzberger

PARIS-Possibly the most interesting shift in world balances this decade will eventually be seen not as the ending of two dominant military blocs and the start of a vaguely perceived pentagonal grouping—the United States, Russia, the European Community, China and Japan-but as the emergence of the nonaligned underdeveloped lands as an effec-tive global force.

This is not because of their immense population, once described to me by Algeria's President Houari Boumedienne as "the Third World's atom bomb." It is rather because that inchoate collecton of nations possesses certain key raw materials which, if held back, can weaken if not paralyze at least some industrial Oil is but the first and most flamboyant example of what may prove to be an emergent pattern. Boumedienne told me (February, 1971): "Petroleum is in Algerian earth. It must be used for the Algerian national economy and not for the benefit of other, richer lands. All the wealth of the Algerian earth belongs to the people of Algeria." (This includes another key energy source -natural gas.)

Increased Prices

Boumedienne continued: "There and we must assert our ownership . . . The Algerian state, according to international law, has the right to nationalize any foreign concessions.". The day after our talk he nationalized 51 percent of France's petroleum concession. In July, 1972, he predicted in another conversation an energy crisis with the Middle East and North Africa becoming vital to world development.

There is little disagreement among the oil-states on this, no matter how much they may argue on other matters. The shah of Iran, although poles apart from Boumedianne, told me the last time I saw him (April 14, 1973): The UN Charter states specifically that all the natural wealth of a country belongs to that country. . . . We know our fuel business and we will sell energy from an organization at least as trustworthy as that which existed before. . . . Anyone who has the money can come and buy our

Since last October's Arab-Israeli war, many of the most important petroleum-owning states (outside of North America) have readfusted to the old law of supply and demand and realized they can make more money by withholding oil from the market while enormously boosting the price.

This has worked like a dream, aided by lack of planning in the industrial West and Japan which somehow refused to believe it possible that they could lose eternal access to cheap fuels owned by other peoples. shah told me in 1961 that the United States wasn't doing enough to protect its access to oil abroad. He recalled later: "Nobody believed me then. But now your country realizes the importance of this.

Copper, Too

Petroleum and natural gas are only part of the picture. New squeezes are mevitable in other areas. Copper could be next. At last year's Arab summit, President Joseph Mobuta of Zaire addressed the meeting (first non-Arab to do so) and there have since been reports that he was offered funds to stockpile copper from Zaire and neighboring Zam-

Zaire, Zambia, Chile and Peru are the four largest copper suppliers and, despite ideological arguments, they have all agreed to restrict exports if the existing favorable price structure threatens to collapse. Arab stockpiling of Zaire-Zambia copper would probably boost prices. This same kind of logic is bound to be applied to other materials. The law of supply and demand can be a handy weapon when properly used. To a large degree, neither the United States nor the Soviet Union (much less China) have been seriously inconvenienced by the first successful attempt to apply this law-in the instance of petroleum. They cially the United States) can easily cut down wasteful usage. But the day is coming when the Third World applies more more political leverage by restricting access to more and have access to largely sufficient more items. This is normal logic. It is high time, therefore, that the technically advanced West gets ready to act in unison (as tentatively suggested by Kissinger) to face inevitable difficulties which could further hamper its progress.

If this is not done, some Western nations face the possibility that a decade or two hence, because of their overloaded social -and not the Third World-will be the earth's underdeveloped

Charles (Chip) Bohlen

The Herald Tribune has received so many letters of eulogy since the death of Mr. Bohlen on Jan. 1 that it is not possible publish them all. Mr. Bovey's letter is presented to represent

Mr. Sulzberger's tribute (IHT, Jan. 5-6) to Ambassador Bohlen is so just and so elequent that there is little to add. But even Mr. Bohlen's most ardent admirers outside government cannot really know what it was like to work with this extraordinary

My first encounter with him took place at the Paris embassy mission in the midst of the Cuban missile crisis. On one of those hectic evenings, I came in late from the Foreign Ministry to find a stranger of unquestionable distinction pacing the dim rabbit-warren that housed the poa day or two before he presented his letters at the Elysée: he had therefore the double frustration of passing those crucial hours outside the area of his passionate interest and with no official status, When I had introduced myself, he resumed his pacing Why did he do it?" he kept "How could he do it?" I realized that he was brooding over the fantasies of Nik!ta Khrushchev, and although he could have expected no answer from the likes of me, I was flattered that an expert of his stature should share his own perplexity at that perilous moment in the history of Soviet-American relations and indeed of the whole bipolar world as we had come to know it.

He understood Gen. de Gaulle as well as anyone, I think, al-though the first months evoked startled growls at the general's timing, especially the speed with which he rejected the post-Nassan offer of the United States and cast Great Britain into outer darkness. He never failed to acknowledge De Gaulle's great qualities, even when the general's misconceptions about the United States were causing the sharpest irritation. Of the numerous ambassadors who dealt with him, he was clearly the most effective. He alone had intelligence and courage enough to tell Washington to sit tight, stop fussing, and live from day to day-all of which birned out to be just the right tectic. He was too ripe diplomat and too experienced in the vagaries of human character to take seriously the cando problem solvers, who suffered from the misconception that Gen. de Gaulle was a kind of cosmic tycoon with whom one could strike interesting bargains. One of his colleagues at a nearby post kept bombarding the State Department with cables in sense, but his recommendations were as impracticable as they were ingenious. "Guidance again from Old X." the ambassador would sigh. "Now you boys draft up a little message for him. Not too rough-he means well-and not too sweet either. You know -the razor in the velvet glove."

At Mr. Bohlen's staff meetings. he went straight to the heart of every question, and he disposed of adversary arguments, French or American, with a kind of mild-mannered and humorous ferocity that never failed to cause a chuckle. At one dull meeting of American chiefs of mission in 1966, he leaned back and demolished the analysis of one optimistic colleague who had predicted a glorious future for American leadership in NATO. He summed up his views by announcing in the gentlest of tones that he had never heard anything with which he agreed less. "Thank God," said one of his other colleagues, rubbing his bands with delight, "at last a note of controversy!"

When I moved to the political counselor's desk, Mr. Bohlen became a neighbor, and I used to look forward to his incursions through the little postern door that connected our offices. Motioning me to keep my seat, he would wander about, somethin with his hands folded behind his head, and after he had to give up smoking, he chewed on a dummy holder. He would air his views, many of them highly unorthodox, on various subjects, mostly the big ones:

Vietnam, Chinese recognition, Franco-Soviet relations. Under-neath the casual discourse and the coruscation of humor, one sensed the vibration of cords of steel. And having by this time developed a certain confidence in the material which our section sent up to him, he would pause now and then in his perambulations, and absent-mindedly scrawl on anything of desk that looked green, which was the color of outgoing cables. Often I had not yet read these myself, and I had trouble convincing my subordinates that they should make changes in masterpieces which obviously bore the boss's stamp of approval.

It was this confidence, this casual and easy approach that made it a joy to work with him. He never badgered his subordinates for anything and never fiddled with their reports, but everyone knew what was wanted and no one would dream of going slack. Always one felt drawn to the highest standards of precision, punctuality, loyalty, calm-judgment—the four great diplomatic virtues, according to Tal-leyrand—and always one counted on his undeviating integrity. Like Talleyrand also, Mr. Bohlen was not an admirer of eager beaverism: The embassy under his hand, and even at tense moments, hever roured like a furnace but humned evenly like a well-adjusted dynamo. And on everything he touched, he left a certain high polish which resists definition and which one encounters only once or twice in a lifetime in any profession and especially in diniomacy.

JOHN BOVEY. Paris.

U.S. Constitution

James Reston's discussion of "Nixon's Last One Thousand Days" (IET, Jan. 3), as most of the comments you have published on the Watergate controversy, appears to dodge what should be the paramount issue before the American people: Does the Constitution need to be revised so as to make the removal of a president who has lost the confidence of Congress an easier process than Perhaps it is time to consider whether the Constitution is suited to present conditions? Maybe a parliamentary system such as is found in most other democratic states is more efficient than one based on the doctrine of the separation of powers? A discussion of these questions would be infinitely more interesting and constructive than constant variations on the theme: 'Nixon should resign and if he doesn't Congress should impeach

Back to Qadhafi

By William Buckley Jr

NEW YORK-Two Mah. humorists write regularly to a journal called La Stampa 1 Stampa is edited by an Arrigo Le who is Jewish. La Stamps owned by the First Motor e Libys is owned by one Mossi Qudhali

A while ago, Les Stamps no lished a routine piece by humorists. This time around the manner of Art Buche there is a fictitious sketch President Qadhail, who is the natical Moslem, an escetic of his shrinking ferocity, and an ards anti-Israeli. The article inches the following lines:

"It seems that Qadhafi really i a creature of the CIA. He do move a finger without asking their authorization. A religio fanatic? Don't believe it 1 seems that when he was Marsh Tito's guest, he ate an entire bone alone. And it seems he has ar ulcer, it seems that he is a homosexual, that he sleeps on a mattress of tobacco leaves, and, that he keeps a haren of a wives in Switzerland."

Réads Italian

Unfortunately, President Qadhafi reads Italian. This is to, probably, because the Italians owned Libya, until relatively recently. President Gadhafi real the article in La Stamps. To my he was not amused is not be convey the quality of his writh. There was quite serious talk about suspending diplomatic relations with Italy. But in the flush of the recent oil diplomacy, it was quickly recognized that it doesn't greatly hurt Italy to struggle along for a while without Libyan ambassador. But it hets greatly to struggle along without Libyan oil, which is a major source of Italian energy.

Accordingly a thing called the Arab Boycott Committee was convened. It requested Fist in dismiss the authors of the article and also the managing editor.

.The managing editor is not only responsible for publishing the little satire. He is also responsi-ble for having fought as a volumteer with the Jewish army in 1947; against the Arabs. The Plat people have made no commitment to fire either the managing editor or the humorists. So, in Being, they are talking about blacklist-ing Fiat throughout the Arab world. And, who knows, diminishing still further Italy's current Really, one yearns, along with Prof. Irving Kristol, for the uses of gunboat diplomacy. It woulding the navy to defend two Italians rights to make poor jokes. But if the ultimatum had come from Ahmed Takudar, directing the relevant Medici to forbid Dante from continuing the Divine Comedy on the grounds that he was giving Christians, not Moslems, the big parts, one could not react differently. It is a fiendish instrument of blackmail the Arabs have developed. And at with other forms of blackmail there is, of course, no strategically sounder remedy than: to refuse to put up with it.

A Suggestion

Writing a few weeks ago in The New York Times, the sage of Princeton, George Kennan, made wonderfully aristocratic suggestion. What he said was that when the Arabs do make their oil . a silable again, we should, with great dignity, announce that we would not buy any Arab of beyond that which came in during the boycott. There is noble precedent for this kind of thing: like the Negro who, having forced the admissions committee wascept him, discuins to enter the club. But it is of course a little more difficult with oil. Mr. Kennan's prescription is in the imperial manner of Marie Antoinetta except that where hers we flighty and even voluptuation (stuff yourself on cake), Kell-nan's is ascetic (don't use oil).

It is increasingly clear that this simply will not do. The time has come for Europe to take the left by boycotting all Arab states the deny cash-and-carry customer their oil

PEKING, Jan. 8 (Reuters).— China today opened a new front in the Chinese-Soviet quarrel by attacking Moscow's treatment of political dissidents—the first time China has explicitly used this propaganda weapon, which touches on one of the Soviet Union's rawest nerves.

The attack, in an article in the official People's Daily, criticized the "Brezhnev clique" for using a wide range of "fascist" methods of suppressing dissent. It said these methods are arousing inreasing opposition among intel-ectuals, national minorities and the masses of the people.

The article asserted that in recent years the powers of the Soviet police and security networks have been greatly increased and new prisons and labor camps have been built.

It said over a thousand labor amps are reported to exist in the Soviet Union, holding more than million prisoners, besides "soalled mental hospitals, which nake short work of those people who oppose the dark rule of So-"Anybody who expresses dis-

Britten's Shakespeare opera has not been heard at Covent Garden in several years, so it is not surprising that many of the singers were taking their roles for the first time in the house. More to the point is that the company has been able to meet the wide-ranging and varied vocal and physical requirements for so many roles mainly with young singers who have just begun or are on the threshold of international careers.

The nicely balanced yet differentiated quartet of lovers was made up of Anna Howells, a delicious Hermia, Josephine Barstow as Helena, transforming herself subtly from slight gawkiness to poised beauty, and Ryland Davies and Thomas Allen, the stalwart and firmly sung Lysander and Demetrius.

Jill Gomez was a beautiful Tytania, singing with radiant, soft-grained tone that suggested the other-worldly spirit, while the countertenor James Bowman, well-known from the English Opera Group production, has the authoritative bearing

Whether it is praised or con-ideals are in danger of being denned, divorce has become a major fact of American life. Today, the governor of Maryland can, with some impunity, move out of the executive mansion and announce he is leaving his wife. A woman like Diane Smith can decide that her own "survival" is more important than the wellbeing of her husband or children.

This amounts to a basic change in values. People might still promise to remain married "until death do us part," but many of them really mean, "until it does not feel good anymore."

Once a relationship goes sour, it is much easier to get a divorce. for a wide variety of reasons: • The laws in many states have loosened up considerably in recent years. In California and other states, for instance, there is now "no fault" divorce, with no heed to prove that one partner was to blame for the breakup. In addition the process of local Traditionally, marriage was was to hisme for the dreams. In addition, the spread of legal services programs has enabled many poor people to get divorces that they could not previously rity, the procreation and raising his wife, "Do you love me?" her answer is an incredulous shriek:

• The stigma once associated with divorce has virtually dis-appeared in many places. And as divorce becomes more common, it becomes more predict-

 Mobility. In his book "A Nation of Strangers," Vance Packard reported a "striking similarity" between regions with high divorce rates. Just the act of moving causes immense strain on a relationship, he noted, but the problem runs much deeper. At a time when people are seek-ing greater emotional gratifica-tion, they are separated from people who could give it to them: extended family, old friends, teachers, clergymen. As a result, said Mary Jan Hungerford, a California marital counselor, "Two people are thrown in on themselves almost completely."

problem of two people trying to grow and adapt together is aggravated when the husband travels a lot on business, or works in an urban setting far removed from his suburban household and suburban wife. They can wind up living in one house—and in two different worlds.

Above all, mobility shields from traditional community and family pressures. (Next: Why is it happening?)

Higher DM Borrowing By Japan Firms Seen

Deutsche-mark borrowings by Jap-anese companies are likely to increase in the near future as a result of relaxed controls on foreign currency inflows, bankers said today. The Finance Ministry announced yesterday that "key" industries, particularly electric power concerns, are free to borrow money from foreign banks or to float bond issues abroad and to remit the funds to Japan. Although the ministry did not of-ficially announce it. a similar relaxation is in fact in progress for other sectors.

The bankers said that exportoriented manufacturing compa-nies appear to be receiving ap-proval from the Japanese authorities to borrow substantially larger amounts from foreign banks than was the case during the past two years. Whereas the typical large Japanese firm might have been allowed to maintain the equivalent of $300,000 of borrowings outstanding from foreign sources in 1972, financial sources said, the same firm is likely to be able to boost this amount to $500,000 to $1 million or, in some special cases, even more

May Suspend Tax

The government is likely to suspend its withholding tax on interest payable to foreign holders of Japanese bonds issued abroad, Finance Ministry sources

The move is considered neces sary to make new Japanese issues acceptable to purchasers of bonds issued on offshore capital markets, they said.
At present, Japanese law provides for a 20 percent withholding tax on all straight and convertible bond interest payments, but a special ordinance that expires March 31 cuts the rate in half for bonds issued overseas. The ministry sources said that this ordinance would probably be replaced by one suspending the tax effective April 1, the start of Japan's 1974 fiscal year.

The withholding tax was pre-viously suspended for overseas issues when Japan's balance of payments was last in substantial deficit. This allowed Japanese companies to float a spate of Eurobond issues in the late 1960s.

As Japan's payments swung into chronic surplus, however, the ministry banned further Euro-bond issues and allowed the tax suspension ordinance to expire. Now that the country is once again experiencing a steady outflow of foreign exchange, how-ever, the authorities are again

U.S. Panel Urges Float Heavy Selling Of the Dollar Continue

By Edwin L. Dale Jr.

 A unanimous congressional subcommittee urged today that the international exchange rate of the dollar be allowed to continue to float "for the foreseeable future."

The panel also demanded that a reformed international monetary system give each nation the "unfettered right" to float its exchange rate, though it urged internationally agreed "guide-lines" for central bank intervention in markets to influence the

Today's report was issued by the subcommittee on interna-tional economics of the Joint Economic Committee. Chairman of the subcommittee is Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D., Wis.

The committee concluded that "the United States especially needs floating rates, even more than other countries," and con-

"Certainly throughout the forcseeable future it is in the best interests of the United States to let the dollar float in exchange markets according to internationally accepted guidelines."

Committee Criticized

The report was critical of the tentative decision of the Committee of 20 nations negotiating monetary reform that the new system should be based on "stable but adjustable" exchange rates. with floating permitted only in "particular" situations. It said, We believe that both the autonomy of U.S. domestic policies and the joint interests of the international community can best be served by making floating part a reformed international monetary system."

A number of European countries are firmly opposed to per-manent floating by any major country, and a clash may be shaping up in the negotiations. The report said floating helps to avoid "massive, disruptive in-ternational capital flows," helps to "contain inflation," lets nations pursue "relatively independent" domestic monetary policies and does not "necessarily" impede international trade and invest-

The subcommittee supported intervention by central banks, even when rates are floating, to avoid "disorderly" market conditions. In the present situation, with a large "overhang" of excess dollars in some foreign central banks, the report also said the United States should "acquiesce" in sales of dollars by them to hold up their own currencies so long as these sales "do not con-'dollar dumping' that results in the export of excessive amounts of commodities already scarce in the United States." It added: "Under no circumstances should reduction of the dollar overhang explicitly or implicitly be allowed to become a vehicle for re-introduction of fix-ed dollar exchange rates."

Although the subcommittee urged that the dollar continue to

While it recognized that many countries would want fixed par values for their currencles, it said each country should decide which type of texchange rates regime is best for it, and reverse this decision only when the evidence for a change is overwhelming."

Firms in U.S. Plan to Beast Their Outlay

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (AP-DJ).-Businessmen plan a strong 12 percent rise in capital spending in 1974, the Commerce De-partment said today.

Plant and equipment outlays are expected to total $112.11 billion this year, up from an esti-mated $100.08 billion in 1973, when spending rose 13 percent, according to the department's annual survey of capital spending ulans.

The department said the impact of the Arab oil embargo on capital spending this year can not yet be appraised even though survey responses were received after the announcement of the Capital spending by manu-facturing industries is seen rising a substantial 17 percent this year to $44.4 billion from $38 billion last year, when manufacturers outlays rose a hefty 21.2 percent. Durable goods producers plan to spend $22.61 billion, up 16.6 percent from $19.39 billion in 1973, when outlars rose 24 percent. Manufacturers of nondurable goods plan a 17.1 percent rise in spending to $21.8 billion, following an 18.4 percent increase last year to $18.61 billion.

The Commerce Department survey indicates spending by manufacturers will be led by a 31.2 percent expansion in outlays by paper producers and a 28.4 percent increase by nonferrous metal producers. Declines in outlays are forecast

To Monetary Fears NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (IHT).

Heavy selling in the blue chips and high-priced clamour stocks sent prices sharply lower on the New York Stock Exchange today. But gold mining shares attracted strong support for the second day in a row. Part of the market's setback was attributed to the uncertainty about conditions on international money markets stemming from the sharp rise in the price of gold bullion in London, and part to the big jump in the December wholesale price index. The Dow Jones industrial average pulled back 15.07 to 861.78. Selling was pronounced with volume totaling 18.08 million shares compared with 19.07

Everything you have to know to invest successfully in Belgium. For the price of a postage stamp.

send us your business card. By return mail you will receive a copy of our brochure: Belgium, Land of Investment.

Our 100 pages contain everything you need to know about the new center of Europe: the country, its economy, labor and corporate legislation, the rules and regulations governing investments,

Just ask your secretary to dividend payments, bonuses, stock issues, bank loans, commercial transactions in general, import-export and the taxation

This useful work is well illustrated:comprehensive maps, photographs, graphs, and tables abound. It's written in a straightforward, non-technical style that you don't have to be a specialist to understand.

We're not giving away this brochure for philanthropic reasons. We're doing it to give you a glimpse of our competence and willingness to deal with your problems.

So that when you do come to Belgium there will be good reasons for our working together.

WHAT THE ECOLOGY MOVEMENT IS DOING TO LAND VALUES.

(And Why Gur Clients Love It.)

It's simple: as more California land is being removed from the marketplace by conservation-oriented laws, the values of properly selected investment lands are being driven up faster than ever before.

Environmental-impact studies, Proposition 20, the Open Lands Act, the emphasis by county governments on density development, the Williamson Act - these are some of hurdles faced by amateur land investors, the ones who are complaining about the environmentalists.

But PBL clients know that local and state conservation laws work to their benefit. Look at it this way: these laws make the remaining developable land even more valuable because it's scarcer.

We take advantage of the situation and locate for our clients the right investment properties at the right price and terms. That's because we know which parcels will be zoned out of development by conservation-minded governments. And we know how to turn the remaining, prime properties into profits for you.

PBL relies strictly on data research and analysis in locating investments for our clients. We never guess. And our clients don't have to guess, either. We leave the guesswork - and the complaints - to the amateurs. Please send brochure.

On the diagramed deal South found that a sound slam contact that is doomed by unfavorable distribution may after all succeed through the generosity of an opponent.

South opened with two clubs, artificial and forcing. He then showed his two major sults and North supported hearts. North's first bid of two diamonds was negative, but his second bid of three diamonds was mildly en-couraging since a "second nega-tive" of three clubs was available

So South pursued slam pro-spects with a Blackwood bid of four no-brump. Such action is usually inappropriate when holding a void, but South could see that the diamond ace in the North hand would provide a useful club discard. On finding that North held an ace, South bid the heart slam.

imaginative than the author. Because this is a "fantasy," all responsibility for coherence or meaning automatically becomes ours. The book's best ideas are so under-developed that we find ourselves filling them out in a sort of defensive reflex. And Mr. Frayn's less successful inventions bear such a strong resemblance to actual ordinariness that his suit seems to have outwitted itself. If the actual is indeed the ultimate parody, then we don't need suthors.

Waiting in his car for a traffic light to change, Howard Baker falls into an improbable dream in which he takes an "expressway" into a celestial city, compounded of Paris; London, New York and Heaven. Here he discovers that he can fly, change his age at will, speak and understand any language, succeed at anything he turns his hand to like Superman. He is boringly omnipotent.

With a grudging effort, I can visualize possibilities in some of these postulates. When he falls tricks. He can ruff one spade in the dummy and run the nine of in love for example, Howard and his mistress Rose might copulate on the wing like eagles, as D. H. Lawrence wanted to do. In a given situation, Howard South set out on the right could change to an age that might make what he is doing more poignant or interesting. His polyglot talents might produce some Joycean or Nabokovic word play. But Frayn does not make even this minimal, off-thetop-of-the-head use of his inventions, and I have no choice but tered his hand with a club lead and led another low spade lead to wonder why he took the

To his surprise, Howard meets all his friends in this dream city and they all get dream jobs. Howard works at "designing the Alps." Charles Aught is "In inspiration," helping John Donne and Yeats with their poems. Bill Goody tries "to stop the laws of logic being passed." Roy Chase is in "counsels." seling," currently advising medieval kings and 19th-century prime ministers. Phil Schaffer's profession is "creating man." Barrett Kessell has lunch with God, on the 16th floor of the RCA Building in a room that is "all white sofas."

For Christmas, Howard "buys his children a complete working model of their family and its life." This is a bit better. The children prefer their toboggan, however, and his wife soon tires of the toy, but Howard is hooked on it. Howard writes a "report on the human condition." which "recommends improving the quality of life by gradually people away from unhealthy indoor forms of death, such as heart disease, and offers more facilities for dying traditional outwardlooking deaths in the fresh air. To this end, he urges the setting up of carefully landscaped mountains and waterless deserts in the main centers of population and stocking them with carnivorous animals and poisonous reptiles.

To add to his other burdens. Howard is given the thankless task of making gnomic remarks.

SWEST Dreams," by Michael "My work," he says. "depends upon my having some kind of ... which asks the reader to be more imaginative than the author, plexity and ambiguity. Our whole involvement in the world is devious." This is one of the author's frequent fill-in-the-blanks passages. Howard advocates "the universe which men will create for themselves . . . of ice warm enough to warm the hands on . . . of air too thick for aircraft to fall out of ... of bacteria the size of hamsters, living peacefully in the zoo."

As you can see. Mr. Frayn exchanges the actual for some thing duller. Suspense stories thing duller. Suspense stories sometimes do this too, but the better ones achieve a peculiar kind of hypnosis somewhere along the way. This is more like narcosis. At one point, Howard is so fired by his love action with Rose that he "passes affair with Rose that he "passes right through a library and emerges on the other side coughing slightly from the dust in the books." Something could be made of this—possibilities spring to mind, just as hope springs eternal in the human breast—but the author remorselessly turns his back on them, and US. The curious thing is that Mr. Prayn is a very capable writer. His earlier novel, "Against Entropy," was quite good. I don't know what brought on this fit of uncontagious giggles which he calls "sweet dreams," but I will say that I cannot recall a dream in fiction which wasn't a bore. While it is true that the traditional novel sometimes seems "too tight' to accommodate contemporary experience, I think it is a better risk than the all-or-nothing gamble known as hanging loose."

Israel, Tokyo, Rome, London-even New Delhi, where the people are so poor, you see kids kicking a ball around the streets. They want national heroes. They need national heroes. Sport hasn't even begun to become the factor in the world it will be."

IFA handles television deals for the World Hockey Association and North American Soccer League. Yet, each has players who are represented by Woolf.

It is conceivable that this merger of Woolf's athletes with IFA's show-business and TV orientation can make a tail-wagging-the-dog situation—in which athletes and their agent create playoffs between countries and determine where expansion will take place.

"We know the world's appetite for athletics," said Josephson. "We represent Montreal for the 78 Olympics. Woolf is fond of pointing out that "the sports here of today is what yesterday's movie star was. Today's athlete has fan clubs, he does commercials, he writes autobiographies."

By Lincoln A. Werden PEBBLE BEACH, Calif., Jan. 8 (NYT).-With rain falling per-sistently, the ill-fated Bing Crosby golf tournament was called off yesterday with Johnny Miller declared the winner.

Miller finished with a 54-hole score of 208, 8 under par, and held a four-stroke margin. The U.S. Open champion will receive $27,750 as the players will receive three-quarters of the original purse of $215,000. Grier Jones placed second at 212.

Before calling off the event, officials called a fourth-round postponement until today. But a later inspection of the Pebble Beach course, plus a forecast for continued rain, forced them to cancel the finale.

"The course is unplayable and likely will be even worse Tues-day," said Jack Tuthill, tourna-ment director for the Professional Golfers' Association Tournament Players' Division. "Almost every green is under water and it would not be fair to the players on such HOUSTON, Jan. 8 (NYT) .-When the Miami Dolphins won the Super Bowl a year ago, the still had their skeptics. It was almost as if, by streaking through have any blocking sleds and the 17 games, they had been too perfect to be accepted for what they were—the best team in National Prothall League history. But this season they've convinced the skentics. They've even convinced the oddsmakers.

> For the first time in eight Super Bowl games, the team from the American Conference, the other league, is the betting favorite over the team from the National Conference, the establishment. The Dolphins are listed as a seven-point choice. If they defeat the Minnesota Vikings on Sunday, they will join the Green Bay Packers as the only teams to win two consecutive Super Bowl games. More important, they will earn a stature com-parable to the Packer teams that Vince Lombardi left as his legacy. But the Dolphins aren't awed by their opportunity. In their clinical, almost detached manner. they believe they're better than those Packer teams were. And in a few seasons, they agree, another team will be better than they are. "I think we're better than the Packers but I'm prejudiced." Lar-ry Csonka said, smiling. "I think we're a little deeper and I think we have a better passing attack than the Packers had." When the Packers were winning the first two Super Bowl games, most of the current Dolphins, such as Csonka, were in college. Now the Dolphins are competing in their third consecutive Super Bowl game. When they appeared yesterday in their

Friendlier Dol

"Lombardi and Shula are the same type of coach," said Marv Fleming, the tight end who was on those two Packer teams and has been on the three Dolphin teams: "Each is a disciplinarian. Each demands a lot. The difference is that Shula is more personable. You can walk up to him after practice and say, 'Coach, can I see you a minute?' and he'll stop and talk to you. With Lombardi, you had to make an appointment "

Fleming has earned approximately $140,000 in post-season money with the Packers and the "When it came down to the money part, it was like grabs on the Packers; they were a lot more money oriented," Fleming "The guys on the Dolphins are a lot more friendly." On offense, the Packers never had a running back with the breakaway talent of Mercury "That might be the difference right there." Morris said with a wink. "To me, comparing us to the Packers is like comparing Muhammad Ali to Rocky Marciano, two different styles. We're a little more wide open. I never played under Lombardi so I don't know about him but I know about our mentor. Don Shula is basically a realistic coach. No rahrah stuff. That rah-rah stuff is false. In a crisis, it turns on The Packers also didn't have a wide receiver in a class with Paul Warfield as a deep threat.

"They had good solid receivers." Warfield agreed, thinking of Boyd Dowler, Max McGee and Carroll of Bart Starr as a strategist. "I knew all about Starr but I never tried to copy him." Griese said. 'I look at the way he played and I see a similarity. We're each the same part of the machine. It makes you wonder if that's the way you have to be as a quarterback to have a good club."

On defense, the Dolphins use the zone pass defense that is popular now, whereas the Packers usually employed man-to-man

"We've got more wrinkles in our coverages," Dick Anderson, the Dolphins' strong safety, said. They played tough and beat everybody that way. Other than that I can't compare the defenses but I remember watching Jim Taylor run. He was a thrashing type runner. Csonka is a much bigger man. Zonk draws a bead on a guy and runs over him. Taylor followed his blockers more and was a little faster." The evolution of the athlete is another reason why the Dolphins believe they're superior to the Packer teams. "Athletes get better," Jim Kiick said. 'Look at Gale Sayers. He ran 9,8 and everybody thought he was fast. But now O. J. Simpson runs a 9.3 with the same ability. O. J.'s better. I think our team's better for the same reason. Athletes keep getting higger, faster, quicker, stronger. In a few seasons, there'll be another team better than we are." But the romance of comparison with the Packers doesn't appeal to all the Dolphin players.

"That's just so much bull," said Manny Fernandez, the defensive tackle, "I just play football, I don't worry about whether we're better than the Packers were. The important thing to me is that we're better than the Vikings in next Sunday's game. I never read much about Lombardi. Cosches don't mean that much to me." The romance of a game with those Packers appeals only to one Dolphin-the ex-Packer, Mary Fleming. Whenever anybody asks me which team would win," he says, "I always tell them, Whichever one I'm on."

Prison Players Would Love Fast Break

By Neil Amdur

REIDSVILLE, Ga., Jan. 8 (NYT) .- It's not that Joe Hopper a recruiter or bird dog, mind you. But when he read about a prominent 7-foot pro basketbail player being convicted recently he knew what that might do for his basketball team.

"If he loses his appeal, we'll get him," Hopper said, looking as confident as a John Woodencoached team applying for a full-court press. "There's no doubt court press. about that."

"Can you imagine a front line f 7-0, 6-9, and 6-5?" said Bob Hall, an athletic director-type. who may have the longest mustache in the state. "I don't know if anybody would beat us, and I mean anybody."

Enthusiasm for a basketball team might seem normal at Madison Square Garden or Pauley Pavilion. But trying to instill spirit and sportsmanship in a squad of inmates at the Georgia State Prison is not exactly the same as coaching a Bill Bradley or Bill Walton.

"There are some problems, naturally," said Joe Hopper, the 33year-old warden whose genuine interest in sports is evident from the Leroy Neiman (a sports artist: lithograph on his living room wall and Dallas Cowboy cockteil glasses. "But then, we don't get hurt too badly by graduation

Hopper, who played varsity football and baseball in high school, is one of a small group of correctional officials who still believe that an active prison recreation program "can help work off the hostilities and tensions that have led to much-publicized riots and problems in recent.

yeers. At this maximum security prison, situated 70 miles northwe t of Savannah, organized athletic activities include basketball, baseball, boxing, weightlifting, track and field and a chess team that has sprinkled a number of champlonship trophies throughout Hopper's paneled office.

An annual "Prison Olympics," involving 13 state institutions. was started two years ago and includes competitions from baseball to band. Last mouth, Paramount Pictures completed almost three months of filming here for a football movie. "The Longest Yard." starring Burt Reynolds, Eddie Albert, Ray Nitschke and Joe Kapp.

Twelve inmates, including three regulars on the basketball team. had roles in the movie (to be released later this year), which is the biggest reason why the "Eagles," as the team is called, lost to Newton Parker Junior College, only its third setback in six years, according to Hall.

Because playing baskelbell beats painting walls on work details, tryouts for the 15-man roster brought out over 60 candidates. "Only four who made the squad can't dunk, and we're working on that now," said Harold Young, a 5-11 backcourter.

are played outside of the prison. and not because the team is embarrassed to clay before inmates. Until a new indoor gym is compicted in about nure months, the home court is cement and soft Pinancing for the prison's athletic program comes entirely from the profits of institutional sales, alleviating any problems over the use of public funds.

"There's a strong feeling around now to just lock up everybody and do away with all rehabilita tion programs," Hopper said during an interview. "I would hate to see this attitude spread. because I feel it's a backward step. If a guy's not equipped to go into society and carn a living wage, he's going to come right back here."

Hopper, who helped coordinate the filming of the movie, came here in August from the Georgia Industrial Institute at Alto, which handles lesser offenses. Two bas-ketball players at Alto went on to Truett McConnell Junior College in Cleveland, Ga., and both probably will wind up at four-

Pear colleges. "The prison teams have a lot of talented kids, but no coaching." said Gerald Cox, the coach at Truett McConnell. "I've had good luck with the two kids from Alto, and I wouldn't hesitate to recruit a boy in prison if I thought his intentions were good." Hall and Hopper believe the Engles' level of play is comparable to "good small-college baskethall." "We really don't know how good we are 'cause nobody'll play us regularly," said Hall, who has booked games against the federal prison in Atlanta and the Georgia Southern Junior Varsity for next month, "Nobody wants to schedule a prison team much less lose to them." Most opponents treat the inmates fairly, and fans often root more for the Eagles than their own team. "Especially when they see us do our tricks," said John Odom who preceded Walt Frazier

Atlanta before being arrested for what he calls "borrowing." For most of the players, only two of whom are assured of leaving in the next two years, the toughest moment on a road trip does not come on the basket-

as the hero of Howard High in ball floor. "It's having to come back," said Raymond Woodring, one of the two white players on the team. "Those girls sure look good."

Wonderful You and Me

By Russell Baker

which is selling at an astonishing pace declares that we Americans are a marvelous people, but nobody appreciates us. It is a four-minute recorded editorial written last summer by Gordon Sinclair, a Canadian broadcaster.

You will not get a full explanation here of its success. That will to await study by qualified

Baker ket analysts, psychohistorians, evangelists, editorial writers, tealeaf readers, candidates for Congress, television talk-show guests, licensed militants of all persua-sions, Ronald L. Ziegler, Margaret Mead, British journalists and spokesmen for the organic food industry. An event like the huge sale of Sinclair's recorded editorial is known in the analysis business as a phenomenon, and when a phenomenon occurs everybody drops everything and goes to work on it, and we soon have dozens of explanations, no two of which agree. This makes for a fierce argument, and a high old time for a few months, or until the next phenomenon comes along.

It would be foolish for an amatour to offer an analysis of the Sinclair record phenomenon before seeing how the chips are going to fall among the heavyweight analysts. Accordingly, let us content ourselves with a few uncontroversial observations.

The first is that we have come a long way from the spirit of the 1960s in the record business. In those days, we had Joan Baez singing about graves and the Rolling Stones stating their insistent demands for satisfaction. If some editorial writer had proposed reading one of his masterworks—"the new sewer bond issue just won't do"-for the delectation of disk jockeys audiences he would doubtless have been beaten senseless with electric guitars and made into the subject of an uproarlous joke

NEW YORK.-A new record song by the Mothers of Inven-

Well, they said the 1970s would be different, and when they said it most of us probably suspected what they really meant was that the 1970s would be worse, and if so they were right. In the 1970s, people pay money to lister to editorials.

In the 1950s we may have liked Eisenhower and tail fins, but we were not so dim we couldn't see that a man patting himself on both back and chest is in a very funny posture.

Sinclair's flattery is welcome, the more so probably because it comes from across the border. It's pleasant to know that somebody out there likes you.

Those people who are made uneasy by flattery may cavil at some of Sinclair's material. The business about Americans being swindled and insulted in the streets of Paris, for ex_uple, isn't that laying it on a bit thick?

Of course, Frenchmen swindled and insulted Americans in the streets of Paris, and why not? Don't they swindle and insult Frenchmen in the streets of

Sinclair, in the Riggins vein, says Americans are "the most generous and least appreciated people in the whole world." One may wince slightly there. The most generous? What a pleasant thought! But the least appreciated? Is he trying to make us feel a bit paranold there? At the end he predicts com-plete political and economic recovery. Then we can tell the rest of an unappreciative world to go jump in the lake and would be justified in doing so, too.

Does he really want us to be-have so badly? Churchill said: "In victory, magnanimity." Should we say, "Once we're back on top, you won't have America to kick around any more?"

Those of us who lap up flattery will demand more, of course. Editorial writers everywhere will abandon "the sewer bond issue just won't do" for, "by and large, Americans are a much more marvelous people than Sinclair admitted in his miserly praise." We may all expire of a mastive seizure of soft soap.

Dylan Puts the Loch Ness Monsters to Rest

By John Rockwell PHILADELPHIA (NYT).—Bob

Dylan, dressed in jeans, a sippered sweat shirt and a fur hat, sat bare-footed and crosslegged on the living room couch of a suite in the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia Monday afternoon wiping sleep from his eyes and gradually overcoming a certain frog-throatedness usually associated with the early morning hours.

Then, in one of his rare press interviews, he discussed the response to his national tour, his first in eight years.

"Now that it's happened it pleases me," he said, "But if it hadn't happened, it wouldn't have disappointed me, either. "Being on tour is like being in limbo. It's like going from nowhere to nowhere," he said. "But at least the audiences are different. The audiences on this tour have been very warm," he

Maybe Europe

"Chicago's always good, But on our last tour. Stockholm and London and New York and Austin, Texas-we are not making it to Austin on this tripwere good, too. After we finish this we'll sit down and decide what we're going to do next. Maybe we'll go to Europe."

The mood among those associated with the nationwide Bob Dylan tour that began last Thursday in Chicago might best be described as prudently eu-phoric. David Gaifen of Elektra/ Asylum Records, who brought Dylan and The Band back together for the occasion, called the reception at the first four concerts "fantastic." Robble Robertson, lead guitarist and spokesman for The Band, says it's been "incredible."

The response to the announcement of the tour, with over $5 million in sales and some $92 million in orders, astonished Robertson, talking later in his own room, was not as calm.

"The ticket orders and the audience response have been just great," he said. "We've all been

Bob Dylan whose U.S. tour got under way last week with a Chicago concert.

waiting a long time, especially Bob. And when we finally get there, to have it be a disap-pointment would have been really heartbreaking. But it's been wonderful." "The last tour we did, in 1965-6, was like a hurricane," Dylan recalled. "This one is more like a hard rain. The last tour, we were going all the time, even when we weren't going. We were always doing something else, which is just as draining as performing. We were lookfor Loch Ness monsters, staving up for four days running -and making all those 8 o'clock curtains, besides. There won't be any of that on this tour-for me, anyway.

Some Likes

Dylan is not particularly sympathetic to the "glitter rock" phenomenon that has become popular of late. Although he said that he had "no feelings" about the glitter rockers, he offered on reflection that he liked David Bowie-"he probably got started listening to us, back in '65 or '66"-and even Alice Cooper ("good, basic rock 'n'

Robertson is more explicit in his distaste. "It's heartening, the audiences' response so far. We don't take our clothes off. or hang ourselves on stage, or paint our hair. We don't have anything to offer but the music. We are not a bunch of cutte-

The current tour repertory has been drawn from a group of about 80 Dylan songs that Dylan and The Band ran through last November and December in Malibu, Calif. We've tried to do as much as ossible," Dylan said. "We want to keep things fresh," added Rob-ertson, "There aren't any arrangements as such of any of the Dylan songs we are doing. There's no set, beginning, or end, or key. We just play along together, and hope it comes out right."

Dylan has been experimenting with new additions to the program and with the format at every concert and plans to continue with that experimentation. He said that he was surprised at the roaring ovations that have greeted the beginning and end of his solo acoustic sets, but said that he did not plan to expand that portion beyond the present five or six numbers. Robertson said The Band will eventually begin introducing some new original songs, definitely by the New York dates later this month.

Song Writing

Dylan admits to being pleased about the way his new Asylum album, "Planet Waves," has turned out, and Gaffenunderstandably but apparently genuinely-waxes downright lyrical about it. "I particularly like the song Something There Is About You," Dylan said. "It completes a circle for me, about certain things running through my pattern. But I think they are all good," he added quickly. "I don't play favorites."

"I still write songs the same way I always did: I get a first line, the words and the tune together, and then I work out the rest wherever I happen to he, whenever I have time. If it's really important. I'll just make the time and try to finish it. I do write less songs now than I used to, though. Seems like I do a lot less of everything now. Although yes, family life (Dylan and his wife, Sara, have five children]-that takes its part, too."

Dylan's performances in the recording studio sometimes sound more relaxed and natural than his work before a live audience, but he insists he isn't conscious of any difference in his style. "It's hard in a recording studio for me. In the old days. I'd have to get drunk or something. It's such a manufactured sort of atmosphere"

The thought of his upcoming performances in the New York area at the end of the month brought a smile. "Oh, I love New York," he said. "I'm not really livin' in Los Angeles-we're just passin' through I'm gonna have places all over."

Although he said that his neck is still sometimes affected by the weather after his near-fatal motorcycle accident in 1966, Dylan is clearly sanguine about his life these days and appears genuinely glad that his days as a cult hero seem to be over. "It had to be somebody, and it happened to be me. I just picked this suit of cardsor it was handed to me. Now I want to do a lot of different things. I'd like eventually to make my own kind of movie, but first I'll have to do two or three more to get into 'em. Eventually, my turn will come. "And I'd like to put out a book of my drawings, and later maybe retire to a ranch some day. What part of the country? Why, I don't even know what country. Whatever happens will the Rome opera house Tuesday with holy water as a sign of stonement for Monday night's "blasphemous" showing of the film "Jesus Christ Superstar." The Rev. Luigi Severini was joined in his prayers in front of the opers house by some two dozen followers, some of whom had dropped white mice and firecrackers on the audience the night before. After prayers in Latin, the priest and his followers read aloud in Italian the first part of a prayer called "Exorcism Against Satan and the Rebel Angels." They defaced Christ," said Father Severini, "we are now doing penance for it."

The screening of the rock film was attended by Vittoria Leone, wife of Italian President Giovanni Leone, who found that it did "not diminish the message of Christian love." The invitation-only performance was a benefit for the Italian Red Cross and was interspersed with stink hombs, flying vegetables and police action. It had, however, already had the blessing of Roman Catholic clergy who attended an earlier private showing. "While immoral and vulgar films abound," said the Rev. Pasquale Rotondi of the Central Portifical Commission for the Sacred Arts in Italy, "this one by (director Norman) Jewison is, if nothing else, educational."

Pressed to make a choice between associating with murderers or muggers, Cornella Wallace, wife of Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama, would take murderers any day. In an interview in the broary issue of Family Circle, Mrs. Wallace points out that the governor's mansion is staffed by trustees from the state penttentilary. I told George when I moved in that I wouldn't have anyone around the house who wasn't in for murder." she said. "I don't want people around who are arsonists or poisoners and I certainly don't want to be watching out for thieves or people who write bad checks. These people have killed their husbands or wives in a fit of passion; the exact circumstances of the murders aren't likely to be repeated. They're all fine people, not the kind to kill just anybody."
